Murder charge filed in Trimble shooting

Justin Lee Collins

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A Bedford man who was involved in an alleged altercation that led to the shooting death of another Trimble County man has now been charged with murder based on information gathered during an investigation by Kentucky State Police.

Justin Lee Collins, 28, of Bedford, Kentucky, was charged Friday in the shooting death of Terry Wayne Helm, 38, also of Bedford, in an incident that took place on the morning of Monday, Feb. 28, at a residence on Hardy Creek Road near Bedford.

As part of the ongoing investigation, Kentucky State Police learned that the Trimble County Sheriff had been made aware of video that was taken inside a residence on Hardy Creek Road in Bedford on the morning of the shooting.

The addition of that evidence on Friday advanced the KSP investigation, allowing detectives to obtain an arrest warrant for Collins, who was located the same day and arrested without incident.

Collins has been lodged at the Oldham County Detention Center without bond.

Kentucky State Police Post 5 originally responded to the shooting after the KSP dispatch received a 911 call at 7:19 a.m. on Monday, Feb. 28. The Trimble County Coroner's office was called to the scene and Helm was pronounced dead at 9 a.m.

Hanover dedicates baby box at firehouse

Safe Haven now has two boxes in Jefferson

BY BOB DEMAREE

As of Saturday, a second Safe Haven Baby Box is now available in Jefferson County with the unveiling and dedication of the state's 81st box at Hanover Township Fire Department.

Dedicated in the memory of volunteer firefighter Bill Jackson, who served the Hanover community for 53 years, the box is identical to the county's first Safe Haven Baby Box dedicated at then King's Daughters' Health ambulance garage, 600 West Street in downtown Madison, on Dec. 18, 2020.

State Rep. Randy Frye noted that in being a firefighter Jackson saved lives, and even after Jackson's death in 2015, he has continued to save lives because he created apparatus still in use today by the Hanover Township Fire Department.

"A firefighter without apparatus is pretty much useless," said Frye, who said that with the Safe Haven Baby Box dedicated in his memory "Mr. Jackson will continue to save lives through saving tiny little babies for generations. Perhaps today from up above he knows that this Safe Haven Baby Box is being dedicated today and he's happy if a troubled woman cannot take care of her infant that with this box, she has a safe and secure place for the child."

Jackson, who operated the Hanover Barber Shop from 1960 to 2011, was well-known throughout the Hanover community. His daughter, Mary Beth Boone, and Amy Arbuckle, were on hand from the Madison Mission that was instrumental in bringing the Safe Haven Baby Box to Hanover.

Boone was appreciative for the Safe Haven Baby Box to honor her father "who I absolutely cherished. He was an icon to me. The thought of his legacy living on here is just amazing for me," she said.

In addition to being the 81st Safe Haven Baby Box in Indiana, the Hanover site is the 104th in the nation and 81st in Indiana. The other box in Jefferson County is at the Norton King's Daughters' Health building at 600 West Street in downtown Madison.

The Hanover Township Fire Department's Baby Box committee included Bill Pettit, Nelson Ehlers, Bob McKenzie, Leah Kroger and Shane Williams with Ehlers and Williams installing the Baby Box at the fire department, located at 4190 West Lagrange Road in Hanover.

City water project anticipated to cost $12.3M

BY BOB DEMAREE

As the City of Madison plans to move forward on a multi-million-dollar drinking water infrastructure improvement project, Rob Bellucci, of Commonwealth Engineers, updated the Board of Public Works and Safety at its meeting Monday on an upcoming public hearing set for Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Commonwealth anticipates the project will cost $12.3 million. BPWS members said the improvements are long overdue.

"It's a big project and a lot of money, but it's a necessary evil," board member Karl Eaglin said, citing the age and current condition of the city's water infrastructure demands the attention now.

The scope of the project is large and Commonwealth Engineers has prepared a planning document that's more than 900 pages.

"We worked with the city staff and identified various things throughout the water utility on supply, storage and distribution system treatment," Bellucci and, noting the report included all of that and is the basis for the projects that have been recommended and the water rate study needed for the capital improvements.

"You've got a lot of aging infrastructure," he said, adding that some of the city's wells date back to the early 1950s. "Just to be able to reliably provide safe drinking water for your customers is what we're all looking for."

Brian Jackson, the city's utility manager, said it's been more than 20 years since any infrastructure improvements were made in the city's system. He said the last water rate increase, which he said occurred in 2008, did nothing to address ongoing infrastructure issues.

Mayor Bob Courtney noted the project will include improvements for all storage tanks and upgrades throughout the water distribution system.

Bellucci said Madison's water mains are undersized and some are constructed out of materials that aren't good practice to maintain like old cast iron lines and asbestos cement pipe, which 50 years ago was readily available material but now is no longer used.

"What we're planning on doing is replacing those with PVC pipe, plastic pipe," he said, noting the bigger PVC pipes will provide better quality water and correct the city's under-sized mains to provide better flow for customers and in emergencies.

"Good practice is we don't put fire hydrants on water lines that are smaller than six inches in diameter because you just can't generate enough water that you need in an emergency," Bellucci said. "We've got several areas where there are four-inch mains, and some that are even smaller than that."

Bellucci said the project will also include installing more isolation valves so utility crews can "reliably isolate sections within the utility if they ever

Grant to help county deal with substance abuse

BY BOB DEMAREE

Efforts to bring a residential treatment facility to Jefferson County received a boost recently when a grant was awarded to provide funding to hire a community coordinator who will help better organize and focus local substance abuse treatment.

Erica Cline, who is overseeing the grant process for the county, made the announcement to County Commissioners at their meeting on Friday morning.

The application for the grant through Indiana's Department of Mental Health and Addiction was made by Amber Finnegan when she was the county's Court Services Director before beginning a new position at Ivy Tech as the State Director of Correctional Education.

"I really appreciate Amber getting that done," said Commissioner Ron Lee, who has been active on the residential treatment committee that has been meeting on that issue monthly over the last year.

Cline said the grant awarded to Jefferson County was one of 21 programs funded throughout Indiana. She said once the contract is received from the state, she will send it to the county's attorney to review and once that is done the process or interviewing and hiring someone for the position can begin.

IN OTHER BUSINESS

• Commissioner David Bramer said he is hopeful that the Commissioners can soon finalize their plan for $6.2 million in American Rescue Plan funding the county is receiving. "Those pieces are coming together, and we should be able to finalize a plan later this month, or early next month," Bramer said, as they confirm with attorneys how the county will be allowed to utilize the funds. Bramer believes the county can do economic development planning with the ARP money, along with infrastructure improvements such as sewer systems for parts of the county that need them. He also said there was consideration and planning for a possible airport on the Jefferson Proving Ground property that's in discussion to determine if that's viable.

• Approved an upgrade to add orthoimagery for the county's Geographical Information System (GIS) mapping as proposed by County Assessor Amanda Creech. The upgrade would involve improving the county from nine-inch resolution to six-inch

Understanding narcissism

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am writing in response to the letter from "Concerned Care-Daughter," who said she was approaching caregiver burnout. It sounds to me like she is very empathic, and her older sister may have some narcissist traits. Narcissistic traits include being dismissive of other people's points of view and being very controlling.

My mother had many strong narcissistic traits, and I had to learn to set boundaries the hard way. I've found healing through understanding by reading books and watching videos on this topic, including on YouTube. I might not have a professional background in this, but I have learned a great deal.

Narcissists believe they are special and think they know more than others do. When problems come along, they blame other people because they don't make mistakes (or so they believe). They can be ridiculously defensive. They cannot say phrases like, "You make a good point," or "Thanks for the input," or "I was wrong," or "Can you help me understand?" Instead, they mismanage anger and can have temper tantrums, or they can be passive-aggressive if you don't agree with them. They don't care how you feel, or how or why you prioritize things the way that you do. Narcissists will wear out their relationships. They're exasperating and frustrating to take care of, so they have a lot of broken, strained and difficult relationships, especially later in life.

Empaths, on the other hand, intuitively pick up on other people's feelings. They can deeply understand another person's point of view. They have a passion to be helpful; they are sensitive and are deeply moved by beauty. They love to help the underdog. Empaths tend to be idealists. One of their favorite phrases is, "Why can't we all just get along?"

Unfortunately, the narcissist tends to be exploitative and highly controlling. And when they meet an empath, they can think, "Now what can I do with that person that's going to make me feel better and will help me?" They can try to take advantage of the empath's desire to help people.

So it's important for the empath to learn to set boundaries with a narcissist. It won't change the behavior of the narcissist, but the empaths can learn to protect themselves from that behavior and not have the words of a narcissist carry much weight. By doing this, empaths can practice emotional detachment from narcissists, unhooking from caring what they think. They should not let the narcissist define who they are. It's OK to decide how much to do as a caretaker and stick with it. I find phrases like, "That doesn't work for me," and, "Well, it's not going to work out, is it," very helpful. — Empathic Daughter of a Narcissist

Dear Daughter of a Narcissist: I am very sorry that you had a mother like that. But talk about making lemonade out of a lemon. You healed yourself by understanding your mother's way of being and all the while setting boundaries to protect yourself. I commend you fully. Thank you for your letter. I hope it helps other people dealing with narcissists in their lives.

Lost 1 son, struggling with the other 2

Dear Annie: I lost a son in 2014, and now both of my surviving sons don't want to have anything to do with me.

Sometimes I feel as if I have lost all three sons. I say that because the two living sons try to control me, always telling me how to do things.

My oldest lives in our house. He and his girlfriend refuse to help pay the mortgage and are now keeping the grandkids away from us. I refuse to fight with them both.

My husband and I decided to put the house up for sale. Why should we pay for them to live for free? Why should we end up homeless?

As for my other son, he's called me horrible names. He has told he that I should never have remarried. But it was OK for his dad to have remarried! I never brought different men to the house — just my husband, to whom I have been married for 16 years.

My ex-husband has since passed away, which has been a blessing to me but not to my youngest son. I know he's struggling with his father's death and still with the death of his brother.

How do I cope with this abuse from my two living sons? The sad part is that they both keep my grandkids away from us, and that causes the most pain and suffering. — Sad in California

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Sad in California: I am so sorry for the loss of your son. Remember, hurt people hurt people, and your sons are understandably in a lot of pain. First and foremost, acknowledge that they lost their father and brother and that it's very painful. Sometimes, when people are in pain, they are meanest to the people they love most — people they know won't leave them, such as their mother. I am not justifying their behavior, just explaining a possible reason why they could be so cruel to you.

I would also look at the way you have treated them. Have you spoken to them with the respect and love that you demand they show toward you? When you say that the death of their father has been a blessing to you, if you are communicating that message to your sons, their resentment is understandable.

As far as living in your house, you have every right to ask them to leave, especially if they are being so disrespectful.

Dear Annie: Many of the letters in your column address the issue of alcoholism and how it affects the alcoholic's loved ones. This is not the first time I have written to you, but I am writing again because I feel so strongly about telling your readers what worked for me.

What worked is Al-Anon, the anonymous organization that gives help and support to the families and friends of alcoholics. Please publish this national helpline number so that individuals whose lives have been affected by others' drinking can find the help they need: 1-888-4AL-ANON (1-888-425-2666). They can also go to www.Al-anon.org for more information. Al-Anon saved my life, and it can save yours, too. — A Friend of Lois W.

Dear Friend of Lois W: Thank you for sharing your experience. I hope it helps others who are coping with similar situations to yours to reach out for help. Over the years, many readers have told me that Al-Anon saved their life, just as it did yours.

had to get in there and repair a break without having to have an extensive outage for a large number of customers."

The work will also include replacing fire hydrants. There are several hydrants in the system that either produce low water volume or no longer work and Bellucci said the upgrades will improve operations and maintenance costs.

Bellucci estimated work could begin on the project in the fall — maybe October.

"There's usually a 60 to 90 day gap from the time you get bids in hands to executing contracts," he said, adding that allows ordering and delivery of materials.

Jackson cautioned that the process also involves the time of going through City Council with the rate study as well as the required public hearings. Once the project does begin, Bellucci estimates a 14-month work schedule to complete.

As part of the rate study being done to determine future water rates associated with the cost of the project, the board approved an engagement agreement for the water rate study currently underway.

Courtney said in the future the city needs to better consider the "frequency and methodology" in which water rate increases occur, noting that water rates cannot be increased without a detailed water rate study and because it's been approximately 14 years since the last one it is a more complicated process in getting that done.

"We need to detail more frequently with our changing cost structure than every decade and a half. That's why this is more complicated and more expensive and takes longer," the mayor said.

resolution that will provide greater accuracy and detail, and then take Hanover and Madison from six-inch resolution to three-inch resolution to provide the current greatest detail and accuracy. "I think almost every office in the county uses the GIS mapping," along with the Town of Hanover, the City of Madison, and the public, said Creech. She said $956.24 of the cost will be paid by the state with $1,500 coming from the County Prosecutor's office, $1,500 from the City of Madison and $8,692.92 from the county.

• County Highway Superintendent Bobby Phillips said work on the Doe Run bridge structure is scheduled to begin April 1 with the only possible delay being whether a phone line can be relocated in time. He said three culverts are being replaced on Brooksburg-Manville Road necessitating a closure of that road but "we're going to try to keep that to daily road closures" so there will be access early morning and in the evenings. Phillips said there is a school bus route that uses the road, and "it's quite of a bit of inconvenience for them to get around" so he's been working to accommodate that. Additionally, Phillips said the county highway department is "still fixing a lot of roads with the freezing and thawing" that creates potholes, along with clearing debris out of ditches and roads.

• Terry Rowlett asked when County Road 925N between Copeland Ridge Road and Flat Bottom Road in Shelby Township will be repave. Rowlett said he doesn't think it's been paved in 50 years, and wondered if there's a plan for that road. He said although it's not a highly traveled road "it needs some work bad." Phillips said the road is on the improvement plan but "just hasn't made to the top yet." However, efforts are being made to provide maintenance, Phillips said.

• County Auditor Heather Huff said she is working toward "a new way to track grants in our office so we have that information available to us a little faster." She also said she is working with the county attorney on a new ordinance on fixed asset management that she will bring to the Commissioners soon. "We need to decide what our threshold is going to be here, and if we are going to have a tiered threshold as far as tracking our assets," Huff said, noting currently it is set at $5,000 for everything. "There are probably things that should have lower thresholds and probably things that should have higher thresholds, and we need to assess that."

• Granted permission for a limited use agreement between the county and Visit Madison Inc. for use by the Ohio River Recreational Trail as part of efforts to promote the trail that runs through various locations along the Ohio River.

Weary Rebels no match for Providence in championship

David Campbell

Southwestern's Zach Cole (21) gets fouled by Providence's Grant Williams late in the Rebels' loss in the sectional championship game on Saturday.

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Exhausted both physically and mentally from its comeback win the night before, Southwestern had virtually nothing left in the tank for the championship game and it showed as Providence pulled away for a dominating 56-32 win in the Class 2A Sectional 45 final on Saturday night in Hanover.

The Rebels had rallied from 11 points down with 2:30 to play to knock off Clarksville in the semifinals on Friday night, and quickly found themselves down big again against Providence.

Southwestern once again rallied, using a 12-1 run to erase a nine-point deficit in the second quarter but faltered from there as Providence's physical defense took control and wore down the Rebels to claim the sectional title.

"Give (Providence) all the credit in the world. They play really hard, have a tough-nose defense, were really physical with Zach (Cole) down low and double-teamed him every chance," Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum said. "We kept getting open shots, we just couldn't get them to fall. That's what happens. We got a lot of open threes and I think our legs were a little bit dead from from the night before. It took a lot of energy last night to come back."

Like it did in the semifinal win over Switzerland County, Providence (17-7) jumped on Southwestern early, ripping off nine-straight points to put Southwestern in a deep hole. The Pioneers still led 10-2 with just under two minutes left in the opening quarter when Cole hit a 3-pointer and Peyton Gwin got a steal and a bucket right before the buzzer to cut the Providence lead to 10-7 after one.

The Rebels rode that momentum into the second quarter, getting a basket by Jamison Lewis and a 3-pointer by Gwin to take a 12-10 lead with 5:35 left in the half.

Gwin's trifecta got the large home crowd howling but the lead didn't last long. After a timeout to regroup, Providence re-took the lead on a Quentin Hesse 3-pointer and the Pioneers never trailed again.

Weary from the night before, and down a man after senior Parker Davis did not dress due to a violation of team rules, Southwestern was unable to put up much fight. Providence pushed its lead into double digits on a Casey Kaelin 3-pointer with 58 seconds to go and the Pioneers led 26-14 at halftime. The Rebels didn't get closer than 12 the rest of the way.

"Our boys had the right mindset coming in and they were ready to go. Providence punched us in the mouth and we came back and led,"

Providence too much to handle for Switzerland in semifinal win

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Switzerland County did everything it could to hold off Providence, but in the end, the Pioneers proved too much to handle.

Providence was held scoreless for the first 2:30 of the game but erupted for 16 first-half points en route to a 56-26 win over Switzerland County in the Class 2A Sectional 45 semifinals at Southwestern on Friday.

While Switzerland County found Providence difficult to contain, the Pacers had even more trouble with the Pioneers' defense, which took away everything the Swiss were trying to do and left them searching for answers.

"We knew coming in it was going to be tough, especially with the way they they grind you on the defensive end and with how physical they are," Switzerland County head coach Travis Wrightsman said. "But these guys battled through adversity all year and I'm proud of them. Obviously, tonight is not how we want to go out. But through everything that our guys have battled through I'm very proud of them."

While Providence (16-6) was having trouble getting started, it had little trouble holding the Pacers in check. Playing its aggressive man-to-man defense, the Pioneers bodied up against Switzerland's leading scorer, freshman Cam Craig, denying him sp much as a look at the ball and, as a result, the Pacer offense found little traction.

That proved to be deadly when Providence finally got loose. The Pioneers ripped off a 14-0 run in just over four minutes of game time and took a 16-2 lead into the second quarter.

Switzerland County didn't back down and actually outscored Providence in the second quarter, but that opening salvo proved to be too much for the Pacers to overcome. The Pioneers led 22-10 at halftime, then applied the knockout punch in the third quarter, outscoring Switzerland 19-8 to turn the game into a rout.

Points were hard to come by all night for Switzerland. Craig finished with 10 points — 10 under his season average — and Bryce Wrightsman was able to eek out six points. But the Pacers got little else as the Providence defense controlled the game.

"A big part for them was to be as physical as possible with (Craig)," coach Wrightsman said. "Cam is obviously a phenomenal player and he's going to develop that body over the next three years to where he's not going to get pushed around as easy. We're looking forward to the next three years with Cam and the rest of our guys."

David Campbell

Switzerland County's Canaan Johnson (30) gets his shot blocked by Providence's Casey Kaelin (10) during the Pacers' loss in the sectional semifinals on Friday.

Casey Kaelin led Providence with 15 points and Grant Seebold scored 10.

Switzerland County ends the season with an 11-14 record, a eight-win improvement over last season, and coach Wrightsman was thrilled with the way his team developed over the course of the season.

"The record is no indication of how well we played. We had two starters go down with an injury, one of our top guys off the bench has basically been out the last six weeks and COVID hit us a couple of times," Wrightsman said. "I'm just so proud of them because they battled through the adversity all year and finished strong, winning our first game of the sectional and coming into tonight having won three in a row. And I'm just very proud of them and I can't say enough about our seniors. You know, we had my son (Bryce) there, Ben Hicks, Austin (Bosaw), Colton (Tolbert), Cole Riley, Bryce Turner. It's just just a great group of guys that just worked their butts off all year and I'm very proud of those guys."

2A BOYS BASKETBALL SECTIONAL

Improbable rally lifts Southwestern to 57-54 win over Clarksville in semifinals

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

With just under three minutes left and Southwestern trailing by 11 points, it was hard to find anybody in the gym who thought the Rebels had a chance at making a comeback. Other than those sitting on the Southwestern bench, that is.

Southwestern mounted an improbable rally, scoring 19 points over the final 2:30 to stun Clarksville 57-54 in the semifinals of the Class 2A Boys Basketball Sectional 45 at Southwestern on Friday.

"It was never in doubt," Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum said with a smile.

Southwestern spent nearly the entire game playing from behind — leading only briefly a minute into the game — and looked as if it had no chance at pulling out the victory and reaching the sectional championship game for a fifth-straight year.

Those hopes were certainly on life support after a killer sequence with three minutes left in the game.

Clarksville (7-16) was holding onto a 45-38 lead when Dakota Capps was fouled in the backcourt as the Rebels' Peyton Gwin was trying for a steal. Shortly thereafter, Southwestern senior Parker Davis, who was on the bench at the time, was hit with a technical foul for striking the scorer's bench.

Capps calmly sank both of the technical free throws, then hit both of the original foul freebies to give Clarksville a 49-38 lead. It could have been worse. Capps was fouled again just moments later, but missed both of those shots, giving Southwestern a glimmer of hope.

The next two and half minutes were a blur as the Rebels put everything on the floor in an attempt to extend their season and Clarksville did its part by missing shots.

Zach Cole began the comeback for Southwestern with a three-point play, but Capps answered with a bucket to push the lead back to 10 (51-41) with 2:33 to go.

Jamison Lewis hit two free throws for Southwestern and, after a Clarksville miss, Gwin grabbed an offensive rebound off a Lewis miss and put it in the basket to pull the Rebels to within six with 1:49 to go.

Clarksville called a timeout but it didn't stop the momentum. The Generals turned the ball over and Mitch Mingione drained a 3-pointer to close the gap to three at 51-48. Alexander Titus briefly answered the Southwestern run with a free throw, but Gwin hit a 3-pointer on the other end to make it a one-point game.

After Morgan Capps (two free throws) and Gwin (a basket) traded points, Southwestern still trailed 54-53 with 46 seconds on the game clock. Dakota Capps was fouled but missed both shots, and Cole grabbed the rebound. On the other end, Cole got the ball in the paint, fought through two Generals to get his own missed shot and put the ball in while getting fouled. Cole missed the free throw, but Southwestern finally had the lead at 55-54 with 28 seconds to go.

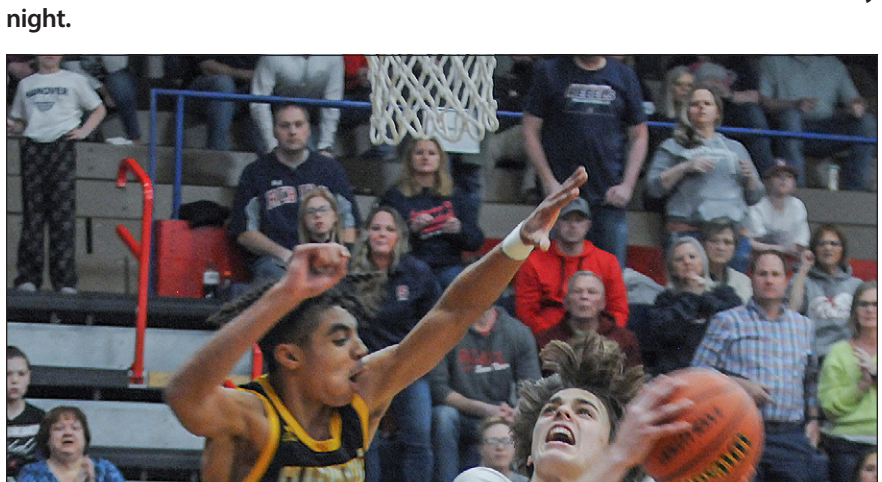
Southwestern's Zach Cole lets out a yell after scoring and drawing a foul late in the Rebels' comeback win over Clarksville in the sectional semifinals on Friday night.



David Campbell

Southwestern's Mitch Mingione (1) attempts to score against Clarksville's Morgan Capps during the sectional semifinals on Friday.

Clarksville had plenty of time to re-take the lead, but a turnover dashed those hopes. Colton Cloud sank two free throws with nine seconds to go to put Southwestern up three, and Dakota Capps' tying 3-pointer bounced off the rim to give the Rebels the win.

"I was really proud of them. Obviously, all the momentum was gone and we had a little brain fart there on our bench. It was a really good moment for our kids to rise," Nussbaum said. "You've got to keep your head and you've got to keep your cool, but I think they did a tremendous job to regather and refocusing and just never give up. You're always in a ball game as long as the clock is still ticking.

Cole finished the game with 20 points to lead all scorers while Gwin had 13 points and Lewis scored 11.

Jacob Seward had 18 points, Dakota Capps 16 and Nadir Muhammed 10 to lead Clarksville.

In Wizards debut, Porzingis keys 133-123 win over Pacers

BY NOAH TRISTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Kristaps Porzingis finally made his debut for the Washington Wizards — and didn't need much time to make a big impact.

Porzingis scored 25 points in his first game for Washington, and the Wizards beat the Indiana Pacers 133-123 on Sunday night. Porzingis returned from a right knee bone bruise and played for the first time since the Wizards acquired him from Dallas in a trade nearly a month ago.

It was his first game overall since Jan. 29. He started and played a significant role despite playing only 21:19.

"Happy to be out there with a minutes restriction," Porzingis said. "I tried to stay calm, not to do too much, play the right way. Most importantly, we got the win.

Kyle Kuzma scored 23 points for the Wizards, who took control of the game with a 39-point third quarter. Washington pulled within two games of Brooklyn, Charlotte and Atlanta, who would occupy the last three spots in the Eastern Conference play-in round if the season ended now.

Washington went right to the 7-foot-3 Porzingis on its first offensive possession, throwing a lob his way. He couldn't quite slam it down, but he did manage to tip the ball in. Later in the first half, Porzingis provided another highlight when he blocked Oshae Brissett near the basket, although Brissett scored over Porzingis immediately afterward.

When Indiana had the ball down three late in the fourth, Kuzma blocked a shot, and Porzingis threw down a one-handed alley-oop dunk at the other end, putting the Wizards up 124-119.

"Everybody was great finding me, and then Deni (Avdija) threw the lob at the end," Porzingis said. "It was a great moment for the first game to be here in Washington, and looking forward to many more moments like that."

Malcolm Brogdon made two free throws for Indiana with 1:35 left, but Porzingis again dunked after an offensive rebound.

"I was pleasantly surprised, honestly, with his conditioning," Wizards coach Wes Unseld Jr. said. "I know we had to be mindful of the stretches that he was going to play, but he handled it well."

Brogdon scored 27 points for the Pacers, who have lost 11 of 14.

"Just finding gaps in the defense, trying to be aggressive," said Brogdon, who went 11 of 13 on free throws. "This team needs scoring, so that's what I'm trying to provide."

Indiana led 61-57 at halftime, but the Wizards shot 61% from the field in the third quarter and took a 96-87 lead into the fourth. After the Pacers started the final period with four straight points, Porzingis made a 3-pointer to push the lead back to eight.

BEYOND THE ARC

The Wizards went 17 of 42 from 3-point range. Five Washington players made at least two.

PERFECT

Goga Bitadze scored a career-high 20 points on 7-of-7 shooting from the field — including three 3-pointers.

"I just trusted my shot. I made some shots," he said. "I know I can do this every night."

TIP-INS

Pacers: C Myles Turner has been out since Jan. 14 because of a stress reaction in his left foot.

Wizards: G Raul Neto left with a sprained left ankle. ... The Wizards and Monumental Sports & Entertainment made a $25,000 donation to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society in honor of play-by-play radio host Dave Johnson.

MLB reacts angrily to locked-out players, season still off

BY RONALD BLUM
AP BASEBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Major League Baseball reacted angrily to the latest offer by locked-out players when bargaining resumed Sunday, accusing the union of backtracking and showing no sign of a breakthrough to get the derailed season back on track.

The squabbling sides talked for 95 minutes on the 95th day of the lockout, largely restating their positions to each other. Talks broke off Tuesday after nine days of negotiations in Jupiter, Florida, and Commissioner Rob Manfred canceled the first two series of the season for each team, a total of 91 games.

If Manfred cancels two additional series through April 13 and 14, he would wipe out 93 more games and increase the total to 184. That would move to the verge of threatening players with the loss of service time and delayed free agency.

This was the first meeting since Tuesday. Manfred was in the MLB offices Sunday but did not attend the bargaining session, aimed at starting the first season delayed by labor strife since 1995.

Tshiebwe shines again, Kentucky beats Florida

BY MARK LONG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — When Florida scored the first five points of the second half, Kentucky coach John Calipari immediately called timeout. He had one message for his seventh-ranked Wildcats: Throw Oscar Tshiebwe the ball.

They listened better than even Calipari could have imagined.

Tshiebwe finished with 27 points and 15 rebounds — his 13th consecutive double-double and 25th of the season — and Kentucky beat Florida 71-63 on Saturday to secure the No. 3 seed in next week's Southeastern Conference Tournament.

"You be the star the next game," Calipari told his guys.

This one belonged to Tshiebwe, who scored Kentucky's next 11 points after Calipari called that timeout and took over. He helped the Wildcats (25-6, 14-4 SEC) end a two-game road skid in league play and win their fourth straight in Gainesville.

They never trailed thanks mostly to Tshiebwe. The 6-foot-9, 255-pound forward and national player of the year candidate scored 17 of Kentucky's 19 points over a 7 1/2-minute stretch spanning halftime. He responded with a dunk in the first half after Florida cut a 16-point lead to six and was at his best after the break.

The junior scored the team's first 11 points of the second half — all in the paint while almost single-handily building a double-digit lead for the Wildcats.

And when the Gators (19-12, 9-9) made another run late, Tshiebwe answered with a layup to make it a 10-point game with about 3 minutes to play.

Long before then, he already had locked up another double-double. His 25th leaves him one shy of the school record set by Dan Issel in the 1969-70 season.

"The things that he's doing haven't been been done in 50 years," Calipari said, repeating the line for effect.

Tshiebwe made 11 of 16 shots and was perfect in five trips to the free-throw line. He added two blocks and three steals, including one that led to a three-point play.

Kentucky stuns No. 1 South Carolina to win SEC women's title

BY TERESA M. WALKER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Kentucky Wildcats came to the Southeastern Conference women's tournament needing a great run to reach the NCAA Tournament.

Thanks to four wins in as many days, their berth is secure as SEC tournament champs.

"Nope! We are not on the bubble," second-year Kentucky coach Kyra Elzy said. "We have our ticket punched! We are going!"

Dre'una Edwards hit a 3-pointer from the top of the key with 4.2 seconds left, and the Wildcats rallied from 15 points down to upset top-ranked South Carolina 64-62 on Sunday to win their first SEC tournament championship since 1982.

Kentucky set up the shot out of a timeout with 11 seconds left. Pass the ball to whoever was open, then catch and shoot. South Carolina tried, but couldn't foul in time.

"I had to let it fly," Edwards said.

Elzy started running up the sideline as soon Edwards' shot went up, knowing it was good. Kentucky senior Rhyne Howard watched as the ball went through the air and compared it to a moment in the movies.

"We knew it was game," Howard said. "We knew we just won."

Kentucky hadn't even reached this game since 2014. These seventh-seeded Wildcats (19-11) won their 10th straight game with this the biggest yet after knocking off sixth-ranked LSU and No. 18 Tennessee to get to this championship.

It marks a dramatic turnaround for a program that started SEC play 2-8 with Elzy suspending Edwards for four games only to become the first to knock off this tournament's top three seeds to win the title. Kentucky is the first No. 7 seed to win with ninth-seeded Auburn in 1997 the only lower seed to ever win this event.

The Wildcats not only snapped South Carolina's 18-game winning streak this season, they also ended the Gamecocks' search for a third straight SEC tournament title for the regular season champs.

"Hats off to Kentucky," South Carolina coach Dawn Staley said. "They're hot. They're streaking. We've been on both sides, this side and the other side, and super happy for Kyra and her program and their ability to weather some storms early on and find themselves as our SEC Tournament champions."

South Carolina (29-2) led 45-30 with 4:45 left in the third quarter seemingly minutes away from cutting down the nets again. But the Gamecocks didn't score after Aliyah Boston's jumper with 5:04 remained that put them up 62-53.

"I didn't really feel like we took our foot off the gas in the fourth quarter," Boston said. "I think we were playing, and they just found different ways to score."

The Wildcats closed the game on an 11-0 run. Howard lost the ball with no foul called when she went down in the lane with 18.3 seconds left, giving the ball back to South Carolina. Zia Cooke missed both free throws with 16.4 seconds left to set up the final sequence.

After Kentucky took the lead, Destanni Henderson threw up the ball from just past mid-court and hit just right of the rim, setting off a wild celebration by Kentucky.

Edwards finished with 27 points, 12 in the fourth quarter with three 3s including the game-winner. Howard finished with 18 points.

South Carolina should still go into the NCAA Tournament as the No. 1 overall seed.

Boston posted her 24th straight double-double with 21 points and 11 rebounds. Cooke finished with 15 points.

South Carolina led 21-18 after the first and 30-21 at halftime after holding Kentucky to three points in the second. The Gamecocks were up 55-43 at the end of the third.

BIG PICTURE

Kentucky: Kentucky set a program record making 12 3-pointers in its semifinal upset of 18th-ranked Tennessee, shooting 50% from beyond the arc. Against the nation's fourth-stingiest scoring defense, the Wildcats finished 6 of 14 (42.9%) after knocking down 5 of 8 in the second half.

South Carolina: The Gamecocks had only a 32-26 edge in scoring in the paint even though they outrebounded Kentucky 44-32. ... They missed their final seven shots of the game. Staley was more concerned with their defense: "We gave up 21 points in the fourth quarter."

No. 12 Iowa beats No. 14 Indiana for Big Ten title, NCAA bid

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Caitlin Clark and Monika Czinano put on championship hats, cut down the nets and danced around with their teammates at midcourt. Again.

Only this Sunday, No. 12 Iowa celebrated with confetti fluttering in the air. It was well worth it.

Czinano scored 30 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, Clark added 18 points and the Hawkeyes captured their second Big Ten Tournament title in four years by beating No. 14 Indiana 74-67 in Indianapolis. It's only motivation to make this a weekly routine.

"We want to cut down more nets," Clark said after being named the tourney's Most Outstanding Player. "That's what we said last weekend, so coming here and moving on — we're just hungry for more."

The Hawkeyes (23-7) certainly are playing like they expect more victory celebrations.

They've won seven straight — the first four to capture a share of their first Big Ten regular-season title since 2008, the last three to claim the tourney title. It's the first time in school history they've won both and now they're likely to host first and second round home games in two weeks.

Sunday's victory also gave coach Lisa Bluder her third tourney title and a record 26th win in conference tourney play. And they did it by relying on Czinano's dominant post play as Clark struggled in Iowa's third matchup against the Hoosiers in 16 days.

"She puts so much pressure on you because half the time she doesn't even dribble before she shoots," Indiana coach Teri Moren said, referring to Czinano. "So blitzing her, doubling her, we tried but she shoots so fast that if you're late on a double, she's going to make you play."

Czinano cashed in time after time against weary Indiana, which was playing for the fourth straight day and logged its 13th game in 31 days.

Grace Berger finished with 20 points and Nicole Cardano-Hillary had 19 for Indiana (22-8), but eventually the Hoosiers wore down in the closest conference championship game since 2015 — and the first not to feature Maryland since 2014.

Still, the Hoosiers were within 51-48 after three and continued fighting after giving up four straight points to open the fourth.

They closed to 60-57 on Cardano-Hillary's 3-pointer with 6:37 to go, but the Hawkeyes answered with four straight and never allowed the Hoosiers to get closer than four the rest of the way.

No. 8 Purdue rallies past Indiana 69-67 to end 2-game skid

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE — Purdue's seniors celebrated one final time on their home court Saturday.

It was the next best thing to a Big Ten regular-season title — a victory over archrival Indiana.

Eric Hunter Jr. had 17 points, Trevion Williams made the tying basket with less than six minutes left and Sasha Stefanovic hit the go-ahead 3-pointer as the eighth-ranked Boilermakers rallied past Indiana 69-67.

"Against IU, there's always a little different energy in here, but it was awesome," Stefanovic said. "I can't really think of a better way to go out of here in Mackey with that crowd and that result."

Stefanovic finished with 15 points, including three 3-pointers. Hunter added five points, five rebounds and made three 3s, and Williams had eight points and eight rebounds.

All three have announced they will not return next season, and they went out in style. The Boilermakers (25-6, 14-6) snapped a season-long two-game losing streak and gave coach Matt Painter a victory in his 600th career game as a head coach.

No, this one didn't follow the script, and at times things got ugly, testy and perilous for Purdue. After trailing 56-52 with 5:42 to go, the upperclassmen delivered with a 7-0 run that kept the Boilermakers in front the rest of the game.

"All three made big plays," Painter said. "Trevion, Eric and Sasha all really came through for us."

Xavier Johnson led the Hoosiers with 18 points and a career-high 12 assists, but his half-court heave to win it with 0.3 seconds left was an air ball. Trayce Jackson-Davis had 15 points and six rebounds while Miller Kopp scored 14 points for Indiana (18-12, 9-11).

The Hoosiers have blown late leads in each of their last two games and have lost seven of nine overall.

Indiana got as close as one over the final stretch and had a couple of chances to tie it or take the lead.

REBELS

Nussbaum said. "But we just give them credit for how good of a defensive team they are and we also missed a lot of shots. Just like we didn't have our legs tonight and that happens in our one and done tournament."

Southwestern, which came into the game averaging 65 points per game, was held to 32 points on 13-for-44 (30%) shooting, including just 4-of-21 (19%) on 3-point attempts. The Rebels turned the ball over just seven times on the night and took 14 more shots than the Pioneers, but just couldn't get the ball into the basket.

Providence, meanwhile, made the most of its 30 attempts, hitting 57% from the floor and 6-of-12 on 3-pointers. Kaelin scored 18 points and was named the tourney's most valuable player. Grant Williams had 14 points and Hesse scored 12 as both were named to the all-tournament team, as was Tyler Simmons.

Zach Cole finished his stellar high school career with 11 points, giving him 1,100 for his career. He finishes as the school's ninth player overall in career scoring and the 27th in Jefferson County history.

Fellow senior Cloud, who had eight points in the championship game, as well as junior Gwin (seven points) joined Cole on the all-tournament team.

Along with Cole and Cloud, the Rebels also graduate seniors Davis, Mingione, Bryce Hatton and Hunter Wiseman. Southwestern ends the season with a 17-8 record.

"I'm so very proud of the senior group. Even though Zach started for three years, he was thrown into a completely different role this year but really stepped up," Nussbaum said. "This is a really strong senior class and I was really proud of the work they put in. They came out here and proved to everybody that they were winners, too."

The rest of the all-tournament team is: Switzerland Co. — Cam Craig and Bryce Wrightsman; Clarksville — Jacob Seward and Dakota Capps; Henryville — Carson Conrey; and Austin — Brysen Montgomery.

Providence, now 17-7 on the season, will face fifth-ranked Linton-Stockton (22-4) in the regional semifinals at Southridge on Saturday. Forest Park (14-10) will take on Paoli (16-9) in the other semifinal.

Southwestern's Peyton Gwin (32), Zach Cole (20) and Bryce Hatton walk sadly off the floor after losing in the sectional championship game on Saturday.
